The proposed website, Hayat, is a healthcare platform designed to connect patients with hospitals and doctors through a single, centralized system. The main purpose of the website is to make it easier for users to search for healthcare services, view available doctors, and book medical appointments online in an organized and user-friendly way.

The website targets three main types of users: patients, doctors, and hospitals. Patients will be able to browse hospitals, search for doctors based on specialization, and schedule appointments. Doctors and hospitals will be represented through structured listings that provide essential information to help patients make informed decisions.

The Hayat website focuses on simplicity and clarity. All pages are designed to be easy to navigate, ensuring that users with different technical backgrounds can access healthcare information without difficulty. By bringing multiple healthcare services into one platform, the website aims to improve accessibility and reduce the effort required to manage appointments.
